

Data Assistant

Paid, part-time

Location: New York City

Prof. Jessica Green, a political scientist who recently joined NYU's Environmental Studies department (<http://environment.as.nyu.edu/object/environment.jessicagreen>) is seeking a student research assistant to help her compile data on international and transnational institutions that govern in the area of oceans.

The job will require writing code to scrape websites and prepare downloaded documents for textual analysis. Ideally, the work would begin shortly after the semester is over, for 8-10 weeks, between 15-20 hours per week. Scheduling is flexible, though occasional meetings will be required.

Pay range between $12-$18/hour, depending on experience.

If you're interested, please contact Casey Wolf with a CV and statement of qualification: cw104@nyu.edu.