Call for Recitation Leader

The Department of Environmental Studies at New York University is searching for a Recitation Leader for the following course:

Fall 2016 – ENVST-UA 100 Environmental Systems Science

Course Description

A comprehensive survey of critical issues in environmental systems science, focusing on: human population; the global chemical cycles; ecosystems and biodiversity; endangered species and wildlife; nature preserves; energy flows in nature; agriculture and the environment; energy systems from fossil fuels to renewable forms; Earth's waters; Earth's atmosphere; carbon dioxide and global warming; urban environments; wastes; and paths to a sustainable future. This course is a gateway to the Environmental Studies major and minor, and one of its core courses. It will cover a very significant amount of demanding material, in order to prepare students for upper-level courses. This course will be challenging, and students should expect a steep learning curve. Recitation Leaders will be available to help students along the way.

Minimum Qualifications

- Master's degree; Ph.D. degree; or a current Masters or Ph.D. student in a natural science, environmental science, or environmental engineering
- Coursework and/or experience in environmental sciences

Job Responsibilities

- Attend all lectures (Monday & Wednesday, 11:00am-12:15pm)
- Lead 2 recitation sections once per week (approximately 20 students per section), recitation assignment to be determined by the program.
- Recitation times for Fall 2016 are:
  - Tuesday, 8:00-9:15 AM
  - Tuesday, 9:30-10:45 AM
  - Tuesday, 2:00-3:15 PM
  - Wednesday, 8:00-9:15 AM
  - Wednesday, 3:30-4:45 PM
  - Thursday, 9:30-10:45 AM
- Grading
- Hold regular office hours

Please send a current CV to cw104@nyu.edu with "Fall 2016 Recitation Leader" in the subject line. Applications will be reviewed from April 8, 2016 until the position is filled.
