Address environmental issues and questions of sustainability on both a local and global scale with course work offered by the Department of Environmental Studies at the College of Arts and Science. Students learn about environmental issues worldwide and explore a range of areas, including environmental science, environmental law, global public health, climate change, and environmental justice. Professors and lecturers include biologists, architects, economists, urban planners, environmental lawyers, and other experts with diverse experience in the field. Students engage with global sustainability topics through internships, volunteer opportunities, and guided research.
NYU ABU DHABI
Discover the unique challenges facing Abu Dhabi, a rapidly growing city built on a coastal desert. Students explore the local environment for firsthand understanding, then investigate the broader global implications of their findings. Courses offered at NYU Abu Dhabi may not automatically count as major or minor equivalents. Students are encouraged to meet with their academic adviser to discuss their major requirements and degree progress.
