PERSONAL INFORMATION

Date and Place of Birth: May 6, 1942; Evanston, Ill.

Citizenship: United States of America

EDUCATION

B.S., physics, University of Chicago, 1962. Minor in mathematics.
Graduation with general honors in the College.

M.S., physics, University of Chicago, 1963.

Ph.D., physics, University of Chicago, 1969.

Courses taught as teaching assistant: Introductory physics sequence (mechanics, electromagnetism, thermodynamics and atomic physics). Course taught independently: preparation for candidacy exam (graduate-level course).

Attendance at NATO Summer School in Theoretical Physics, Varenna, Italy, 1964

NSF Summer Fellow 1964

Research Assistant to Russell J. Donnelly (low temperature and hydrodynamics labs), J. J. Sakurai (theoretical high energy physics).

Area of Specialization: theoretical high energy physics

Dissertation advisor: J. J. Sakurai

Dissertation topic: Current algebra and phenomenological models for the decay amplitudes of K and eta mesons.

POSITIONS HELD- PRESENT

Assistant Professor to Associate Professor (1978) to Professor (1982), Sociology Department, New York University, September, 1973 to present. Director of Undergraduate Studies, 1980-1986, 1988-1990, 1997-1999. Acting Director of Graduate Studies, 1994-1995.

Sociological Association, August 2000. [This paper compares the methods used to legitimate law in the preambles to ancient Sumerian and Babylonian law codes with those used in the preamble to the United States Constitution, the French Constitution of 1791, and the French Declaration of the Rights of Man. It also examines styles of legal reasoning as evidenced in records of ancient Mesopotamian trial proceedings with those of modern law. The theoretical interest is in confronting Weber's ideas about legal evolution with empirical materials from legal history.
